ABSTRACT

The purpose of this handbook is to provide information on migrant programs and services in the state of Texas. Data are gathered from 92 of the 254 counties in Texas. There is a profile for each county selected and for all migrant programs identified in each county. Descriptions of Title III-B migrant programs, the High School Equivalency program, and the College Assistance Migrant program are included in the appendix. Addresses for Texas health projects, migrant labor camps, community action agencies, and Title I migrant education programs are also in the appendix. (HBC)

Dear Sir(s):

MIGRANT PROGRAMS IN TEXAS was developed by the Juárez-Lincoln Center from a grant of the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity, Migrant Division, to the Colorado Migrant Council, Juárez-Lincoln Graduate School.

This handbook was compiled for use by agencies working with migrant farm workers. It is our objective that in utilizing this directory the awareness of programmatic services and needs of the migrant farm worker in Texas will be increased.

The research for this book was compiled by the Juárez-Lincoln Center staff. Special thanks are owed to our Field Data Collectors, Manuel Escamilla, Juan Gallardo, William Manzanares, and our Editor, Frank Carrasco, who compiled the information.

Sincerely yours,

INTRODUCTION

INTRODUCTION

For over four months, the field research staff of the Juárez-Lincoln Migrant Clearinghouse travelled throughout Texas conducting a survey of the services available to migrant farm workers. Programs offering services of any type for which migrants were eligible were included in the survey. Quite often, these services are provided by an agency which uses some factor other than migrant agricultural work to determine eligibility. Information was obtained by either direct contact with agencies or from the funding sources for such agencies.

The starting point for this survey was the identification of a central information source for pertinent data. We discovered that there is no central office that systematically plans and coordinates programmatic effort or that collects the data from all the Federal programs. More often than not, individual programs are not compiling or analyzing data about their own operations.

The current problem facing migrant researchers is that raw data about either the objective conditions of migrants or existing programs is not available in a form that can be used to develop a strategy for solving migrant problems. The Clearinghouse staff discovered that current information relevant to migrant research was unobtainable or difficult to obtain from those Federal and State agencies under which migrant services are provided. For example, the Department of Agriculture regularly compiles data on the acreage of crops that are grown. Information is available on how much of every crop was planted and harvested, and how much farmers received per bushel. However, when information on migrants was requested, data was not available for those crops which utilize migrant labor or which have a need for migrant labor, or the wages paid migrants. The Department of Labor has conducted extensive studies on available employment (over 30,000 sub-categories are listed in one study). Information concerning the availability of migrant labor and the labor demand relative to concentrations of the labor force was not available.

The Rural Manpower Service, funded by the Department of Labor to work specifically with the rural labor force, requires that employers provide information on the length of time jobs will last and the wage scale for such jobs. The Rural Manpower Service was unable to supply the average wage scale for migrants or the average number of days per month the migrants work.

Reports from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare which compile and analyze data from programs serving migrants were unavailable. This dearth of information holds true for agencies in the State of Texas. The Good Neighbor Commission is mandated to serve as a coordinating agency for State migrant programs. However, their budget is so small that they have a staff of only three people and little money with which to plan or coordinate.

The Texas Employment Commission does not isolate information on migrant farm workers. Upon request, they can separate some data. This, however, is done on a "time permitting" basis only.

The State welfare offices make no special provisions in their programs for collection of data on migrants. One State program that has been compiling data and designing programs for the needs of migrants in the Migrant Division of the Department of Public Health. However, funding for this program expired in January of 1973.

Another major problem we encountered is that every type of program has its own definition of a migrant. Consequently, it is difficult to correlate the data from different programs. Definitions of a migrant should consider various factors in addition to level of income and date of last migration. For example, factors such as language and cultural differences should be taken into consideration, along with the special needs of migrants, such as those necessitated by the migrant life style: Proper medical attention to help diagnose and prevent physical damage from pesticides, or the need for a special migrant calendar for schools related to planting and harvesting seasons.

On-site visits to individual programs revealed the tremendous need for on-going staff training in a wide variety of areas. The staffing patterns of most projects revealed a significant lack of employment of migrants in key staff positions.

Although there are a variety of programs which do provide much-needed services, the number of migrants these programs reach is much too small. For example, the College Assistance Migrant Program (CAMP) has less than 100 students in Texas--there are over 300,000 migrants in Texas. Most training programs share this same weakness: The number of people trained and placed in jobs is not adequate to even begin to solve the problems of employment.

Information generated by the Clearinghouse survey indicates the need for a coordinating agency for migrant programs, as well as the establishment of a communication chain between migrant programs. (This could be accomplished by printing a handbook of all services available to migrants and distributing this to migrants. Every one of the books would be registered to the head of each migrant household. Each book would have a section of forms in triplicate. The forms would be filled out by the case worker when an application is made for service. One copy would be kept in the book as the migrant's record and could be referred to when services are applied for. One copy would be kept by the service agency for its own records, and the third copy would be sent by the service agency to a central computer bank for compilation). Centralized and coordinated planning could then be accomplished.

The Clearinghouse determined that there are four factors which must be dealt with in order to begin to develop solutions for problems facing migrants: 1) There must be thorough, in-depth research into all facets of migrant needs. 2) There must be comprehensive planning for migrant programs. 3) There must be strong coordination of program effort. 4) There should be a shift to attack the root causes with enough resources to eliminate them, rather than treating symptoms.

Perhaps an agency established at the State level could conduct on-going research and coordinate all programmatic efforts. With adequate funding, this agency would be in a good position to interact with both Federal and local programs for migrants. It would be able to facilitate the needed cooperation and coordination.

With the current re-shaping of the Federal bureaus, funds, and consequently programs, are now being affected. The 1974 fiscal budget of the President calls for an end to the Office of Economic Opportunity. Programs operated under OEO will either be eliminated or transferred to another department. The 1974 budget request calls for the termination of 70 Federal programs. (One of these is the Community Action Agencies).

Programs such as the High School Equivalency Program and College Assistance Migrant Program are being increased in their funding level. Appropriations under the Migrant Health Act expire in June of 1973, and it is uncertain whether new legislation will be passed by Congress to continue migrant health programs. As a result of these changes, some of the programs in this booklet will be eliminated soon, while others will be expanded.

It is hoped that through the publication of this handbook the efforts of the Clearinghouse staff can contribute to the continuing search for better ways of serving one of our nation's most valuable and neglected human resources, the migrant farm worker.

A. Methodology of Survey

METHODOLOGY FOR THE SURVEY OF MIGRANT PROGRAMS IN TEXAS

The purpose of the survey is to compile a catalogue of the programs and services available to migrants in the State of Texas. The book is intended to aid the staffs of migrant programs by providing a resource for information about other programs. It is hoped that this book will aid in the development of communication among the various programs. Communication itself will be a big step toward the elimination of duplication of effort and past mistakes.

For the purpose of this survey, the county was used as the basic level for research. The target population included ninety-two out of the total of two hundred fifty-four counties in Texas.

The method of selecting the target counties was to select counties that fulfilled any one of the following criterion:

1) All counties which have the main offices of an OEO Title III-B migrant program.
2) All counties which have a Title I migrant school program.
3) All counties which indicated a migrant population of at least two hundred fifty people according to the latest survey conducted by the Texas Department of Public Health, Migrant Program. That survey was released in April of 1972.

For each of the counties selected, a county profile was completed. A copy of this form is included. For all migrant programs identified in each county, an agency profile was completed. A copy of this form is also included.

During the survey of Texas, we identified the following types of programs:

OEO	Title III-B	5
OEO	HEP	4
OEO	CAMP	2
OEO	CAA	48
Day Care		7	Agencies have Programs
State Health (HEW)		21
Title I		104
DOL	Training	7
RMS		1	Texas Employment Comm.

This is not to be taken as the total number of programs. Some of the agencies in Texas receive funds from several sources and consequently have several different types of programs. Some of the CAA offices are not funded specifically for migrants. However, the migrants are eligible under other requirements.

The research for the information in the county and agency profiles was done between September and December 1972.

During the survey period, all the OEO III-B agencies in Texas were visited. All other migrant programs were either visited, called or contacted by mail. After the information was collected, it was compiled into this book. The information came from people who work directly with migrants or from agencies that collect data and not from migrants themselves.

The following agencies provided information to us:

1) Texas Education Agency, Regional Service Centers;

2) Texas Education Agency, Migrant Division of Title I Office;

3) Texas Employment Commission;

4) Good Neighbor Commission;

5) Texas State Department of Agriculture;

6) Texas State Department of Health, Education & Welfare;

7) Texas State Department of Labor;

8) Texas State Office of Economic Opportunity;

9) United States Office of Economic Opportunity.

B. Title III-B

TITLE III-B MIGRANT PROGRAMS

Under the Economic Opportunity Act, Title III-B funds are allocated for the establishment of programs to prepare migrant and seasonal farmworkers for upgraded jobs; to provide alternatives to farm work, if they so desire; and to provide assistance to the family.

Projects operating under Title III-B provide a multi-pronged approach to ameliorating the situation of the migrant and seasonal farm worker. Some projects are established for the adult head of household with emphasis on skill training in preparation for job training. Other projects are aimed at serving the entire family. Some of these projects are in the area of health, nutrition, medical services, housing and counselling. Some projects also concentrate on a specific age group such as infants and children, high school aged youth and college aged youth. For these groups, Title III-B provides early childhood development, H.E.P., and CAMP programs.

Project sponsors of Title III-B include state and local government agencies, universities, non-profit corporations, local agencies and church related groups.

In the State of Texas there are four Title III-B agencies (excluding HEP and CAMP programs).

C. High School Equivalency

HIGH SCHOOL EQUIVALENCY PROGRAM (HEP)

The High School Equivalency Program (HEP) was established by the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity to help migrant children who have not graduated from high school. HEP offers residential training leading to passage of the General Educational Development (GED) examination, or into a career ladder job or college.

Eligible students are migrant youths who have dropped out of school and are between the ages of 17 and 22 and whose family earn less than the federal poverty guidelines as determined by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

HEP students live at one of 18 program sites situated on college campuses scattered through the U. S. In addition to instruction, HEP students receive room and board, intensive counseling and a weekly stipend of $10.

D. College Assistance Migrant Program

COLLEGE ASSISTANCE MIGRANT PROGRAM (CAMP)

The College Assistance Migrant Program (CAMP) was established by the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity to assist migrant and/or seasonal agricultural farm worker youth to enroll and successfully complete a four year college.

Eligible students are migrant youths who have either graduated from high school or hold a High School Equivalency Diploma and whose family earns less than the federal poverty income levels established by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The CAMP program not only provides assistance to students, it also provides supportive services such as counseling, curriculum advising, tutorial services, and other special services as the students need determines. As part of CAMP students are enrolled in a summer session of preparatory work and orientation to college life, workshops in basic college skills and study habits.

CAMP students attend college at one of approximately four colleges hosting CAMP programs. Texas hosts two CAMP programs.

E. Migrant Health Programs

MIGRANT HEALTH PROGRAM

In 1962 the Public Health Service Act was amended to authorize grants for family health service clinics, and for other means to improve the health conditions of agricultural migratory workers and their families. In 1965 the Migrant Health Program was expanded to include necessary hospital care as an available service. In March 1970 the Migrant Health Program was extended for three years and broadened to include seasonal agricultural workers and their families. Also a provision was added to require that other persons be served and that community people knowledgeable of the health needs of the migrant agricultural worker and his family must be given the opportunity to participate in the development and implementation of Migrant Health Projects. In 1973 funds under Migrant Health Act will cease unless the program is extended by legislation.

Migrant Health Projects can be funded to provide any of the following services:

1. Full-time Comprehensive Health Services:
   This service provides a comprehensive range of diagnostic, therapeutic, and follow-up medical services offered by the project on a daily and year round basis by full-time medical staff in a center setting. Provisions are also made to provide dental care, health counseling, and preventive services.

2. Scheduled Comprehensive Health Services:

These services encompass medical services similar to those listed above except they are provided intermittently by means of scheduled clinics. Referrals are also made to local physicians on a free-for-service basis when the clinic is not in session.

3. Scheduled Medical Services:

These services included complete diagnostic, therapeutic, and follow-up medical services through intermittently scheduled clinics. Under this service provisions are not necessarily made for dental care.

4. Scheduled Categorical Services:

These services focus on clinics established to combat specific diseases or categorical emphasis and does not offer a broad range of medical services in a clinic setting. General health care is provided through referrals on a fee-for-service basis.

5. Non-Scheduled Health Services:

All general health care is provided in these services through a fee-for-service referral system to private physicians and to private dentists.

6. Limited Categorical Services:

These projects have specific objectives and are usually limited to environmental health services. Environmental health activities usually involve camp inspections, enforcement of state codes, and coordinating efforts with other local sanitation programs.

7. Administrative Consultative Services:
   This project usually does not provide direct health care and devotes its efforts consulting and coordinating the direct health care activities of other groups.

In Texas 20 counties and the State Health Department have received funds to provide migrant health care. Although only 21 specific agencies have been funded, there is a wide range of services provided. Each agency can provide several types of services. The following table illustrates services being provided to migrants in Texas under the Migrant Health Act.

F. Migrant Labor Camps

MIGRANT LABOR CAMPS

In 1971 the 62nd Texas Legislature considered and adopted legislation which requires the licensing of migrant labor camps. Legislation gives authority of licensing to the State Department of Public Health.

The licensing procedure applies to any type of structure, tent, trailer, or vehicles used as living quarters for a minimum of 3 days and used by at least fifteen seasonal, temporary, or migrant workers.

Licenses are issued for a period of one year and must be posted at the camp site. On-site inspection of camps by a representative of the State Health Department is a requisite to licensing of migrant labor camps.

G. Community Action Agencies

COMMUNITY ACTION AGENCIES (CAA)

The Community Action Program was established under the Economic Opportunity Act to provide a means of solving urgent social problems, such as poverty, and to use public agencies, religious, charitable and neighborhood associations and private citizens to combat local social problems.

Community Action is involved primarily in providing a more effective avenue of self-help efforts by poor, by having them plan, conduct and evaluate their own programs. Community Action focuses on creating change and to help interpret the causes and problems of poverty and what is required to overcome them.

Programs provided by Community Action Agencies focus on devising methods by which local citizens can work together in improving and enriching their lives and the lives of all residents. This focus on residency usually excludes the migrants or seasonal farm workers from benefitting from the Community Action Agency programs.

In order to be a recipient of Community Action Agency services, the United States Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) has issued the income level table which follows on the next page:

GUIDELINES FOR ALL STATES EXCEPT HAWAII AND ALASKA

FAMILY SIZE	NON-FARM FAMILY	FARM FAMILY
1	$2,100	$1,800
2	2,725	2,325
3	3,450	2,950
4	4,200	3,575
5	4,925	4,200
6	5,500	4,725
7	6,200	5,275

For families of more than seven (7) members, $650 for each additional member of a non-farm family and $550 for a farm family is allowed.

In fiscal year 1974 of the Federal Government budget, Community Action Agencies will be eliminated. According to budget materials, "Community Action has had an appropriate opportunity to demonstrate its value to local communities. Evidence is lacking that community action agencies are moving substantial numbers of people out of poverty on a self-sustaining basis."

H. Title I Migrant Education

TITLE I MIGRANT EDUCATION PROGRAMS

Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act provides financial assistance to school systems which have a high concentration of low-income children residing in the district. Funds allocated under this act are entirely federally financed and require no matching grants.

Payments under Title I are to State Departments of Education which in turn make payments to local school districts. The state is entirely responsible for Title I programs. Local school districts are eligible to receive a certain amount of funds established by formula upon submitting a project application.

Project applications include:

1. Program(s) to be supported
2. Budget
3. Number of eligible children
4. Designated Target Areas
5. Provisions for evaluating the program
7. Specific plans for involving parents in program and making information available to the public.

The chief purpose of Title I is to raise the academic achievement for "educationally disadvantaged" children. This category includes low reading levels, inability to speak English, need for greater individual attention, need for instruction which deals directly with their cultural background. Under Title I, funds for migrant programs have specifically been set aside.

Under special funds of Title I such as Migrant, money can be allocated to non-profit organizations if it can be proven that funds are being misused or if there exists a discrepancy in use of such funds. Also non-profit agencies can receive Title I funds if the local education agency refuses money allotted to its school district.

Title I Migrant funds can be used for the academic program, equipment, and supportive service. Supportive services include clothing, medical and dental attention and paying of various school fees. School lunches, snacks and breakfasts can also be bought with Title I Migrant funds.

In fiscal year 1973 a total of 105 school districts in Texas will be operating Title I Migrant programs. These school districts serve approximately 58,000 migrant children. In 1966 the Good Neighbor Commission estimated there were approximately 85,000 migrant children who could be enrolled in Title I Migrant programs.

In Texas several types of programs are provided through Title I Migrant Education. In 51 school districts, 90 class units have been formed to teach the 4-year-old migrant child. A seven month program is operated in 19 school districts. In Texas there are also 42 summer programs for migrant children. While the summer programs are structured in a similar fashion to the regular academic program, their main emphasis is oral expression, arts, crafts and swimming.
